The Mary=n Joe is a Famous and Edible Sandwich

The Louisville Slugger Association has been producing baseball bats since 1884. The bat factory has been located in Louisville, Kentucky, for over 130 years. The factory produces over 1 million bats per year, making it one of the largest bat manufacturers in the world.

The Mary=n Joe is a popular sandwich made with two slices of bread, ham, turkey, and cheese. It is often served with a side of potato chips and a cold drink.

The Mary=n Joe is named after the Louisville Slugger bat, which is the official bat of Major League Baseball. The bat is symbolized by the "M" shape on the handle, which stands for "Mary=n Joe."
